RUMORS

The airmail situation has reached the silly stage, with rumors of sabotage being circulated to explain why half a dozen army pilots and a score of army planes were obliterated in a little more than a week of operation over mail routes.

The rumors within the presence of the manifest difficulties of sabotage on such a broad scale. It would entail the corruption of a large number of men disciplined to army service. It would necessitate a plot of enormous dimensions conceived and executed on a few days' notice.

The weakest point is identification of the perpetrator. It is impossible to believe that any company interested in aviation would do anything to imperil public confidence in aviation. Fortunately, official judgment on the rumors has taken such things into account. The war department's head, Secretary Dern, takes no stock in them.

It has been reported from Washington in various ways that the administration would take steps to restore the airmail function to private companies. Whatever steps are contemplated should be announced soon. The whole method of handling the situation has encouraged rumors. A decisive termination of suspense is the best way to stop them.

NOW JUMP

When John Dillinger was transferred from Tucson, Ariz., to Crown Point, Ind., the country's fancy was struck by the fact that in Crown Point his jailer would be Mrs. Lillian Holley. Mrs. Holley, who succeeded her husband as sheriff after he had been killed by gangsters, seemed scarcely the proper person to take charge of one of the country's most notorious bad men.

But she went to the job in a businesslike manner. Blessed with a jail that was "escape proof," she further increased the safekeeping of Dillinger by surrounding him with a bristling circle of machine guns. Proof of her sincerity was plainly evident. She was taking no chances. People who claimed to see something ridiculous about a lady sheriff soon forgot about her.

They were reminded abruptly Saturday morning when Dillinger, making good a boast, fled Crown Point's "escape proof" jail, leaving Sheriff Holley and her armed guards holding an empty cage. The news was a signal for open season on Mrs. Holley. The lady sheriff has proved that a woman isn't capable of performing the sheriff's assignment, it was said.

The point, however, is indeterminate. Mrs. Holley is in an uncomfortable position, but in fairness it must be remembered that Dillinger has broken jail before, when he was in the custody of a man. Mrs. Holley's efficiency is going to be jumped on by her critics, but what is their basis of comparison?

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, March 5.—Diary: Early abroad, surprised to find that two of our young screen stars each have false upper and lower plates. Mid-afternoon Riley Cooper popped in with his Boston "Michael" he has taught to circle, growl and charge like a Clyde Beatty lion as he plays trainer with a chair.

Dinner at the M. H. Aylesworths, the Grantland Rices, Lucy Virginia Long and the Richard Pattersons there and on to a charity to-do, talking to Kent Cooper who introduced Owen D. Young. To bed late reading Charles Williams' biography of Bacon who had 100 hand warts as a boy.

Thoughts while strolling: Those windows of cashew nuts make a fellow want to sneeze. Arthur Brisbane and Deems Taylor have the same towering foreheads. That wag depositor who pulls his pockets inside out whenever he passes the closed Harriman Bank.

One word description of Ruth Chatterton—whimpery. Chorus girls can sustain conversation all evening with just one line "Aren't you winner-ful?" Florence Rice, to clinch a stage part, learned to play the piano and sing in two months. Whatever became of Josie Collins?

Albert Lasker never misses a new movie. Spooky the way a window curtain flies up whenever I get lost in reverie. And scares me silly. If I were a sketcher of metropolitan types, I'd plant my easel in Bryant park at sun-down. Abe Lyman's expressive hands. Jim Carroll's fat cigar.

Bernard Baruch's offhand ease. The Globe always reminds me of a press agent taking me to an actress's dressing room for an interview, knocking and inquiring: "Are you decent?" The first time I ever heard the stage idiom for "Are you dressed?" Dorothy Gish and June Lillibridge look alike.

One of the best of the late Montague Glass's stories—and what a story teller he was!—concerned the stay-out who arrived at the Lambs at 2 a. m., afraid to go home to his wife at Great Neck. He spied two gray-derbed acrobats in dead-panned quiet at a corner table and invited them to accompany him, praising his wife as one of those willing hostesses, ready to arise at any hour to prepare a tasty spread. Reluctantly, they accompanied. On the way he continued to extol his wife's good humor. Throwing open the front door, she greeted him in frowzy contempt from top stairs and then heaved a flower pot that nipped him flush on the chin. As he came to he cried to his companions: "Jolly little woman. Always clowning!"

I think nothing quite so appealing as the candor of small ambitions. She is a blonde Venus of the cinema ticket window, gazing out from her glass enclosure with a sort of scientific detachment. The other evening exiting, she was bent over a row of figures and glanced up smiling. "A good day's receipts!" I observed. "No," she said, "Just two more weekly payments on my leopard skin coat!"

Personal nomination for the most forlorn of New York's poor little rich boys—John Jacob Astor, III.

Rex Cole's Sunday night buffets before the enormous open fire at his Westchester estate are a bright interlude in the life of many weary towners. He is one of those off-hand hosts who entertains by letting guests severely alone. As a result they are soon huddling in quartets, doing the best of their parlor tricks and exuding that spontaneity that comes only to those who have forgotten for the moment to take life seriously.

At a buffet for Mary Pickford recently, I hear, a brash young crasher whose effronteries became too brazen was called to the entrance hall, given his hat and coat with the suggestion the air outside was refreshing. He asked if he might return to the drawing room of the festivities for just a moment. The favor was granted and after hastily gobbling a dessert, he filled his pockets with cigarettes and was on his way. Which gives you an idea of the New York brand.

Just about the time of year I get toggled out for the cold weather. I pass one of those Palm Beach window displays and shiver right into a congestive chill. Muffled, mitted and extravagantly galoshed, it is a wrench for a nitwit with about one red corpuscle left to come suddenly vis-a-vis with a robin's egg-blue open-throated sport shirt, a back-dipped Panama hat, sandals and a lady's bathing suit that is plum backless. Also it's no particular help to the —br-r-r-r!—bridge work.

Bagatelles: Mrs. Gilbert Gabriel, wife of the critic, is an accomplished painter. . . . Irvin Cobb says most of the Southern plays are incestual instead of ancestral. . . . A famous beautician says all platinum blondes have inferiority complexes. . . . Gus Edwards, who always associates with youngsters, is the youngest looking of the song writers, although a veteran. . . . "The Voice of Experience" gets most radio mail. . . . Tom Geraghty ran himself ragged trying to buy a wash rag in London. Finally by making gestures the light dawned on a clerk in Herrod's. "You mean," he cried, "a face flannel!" And Geraghty got his wash rag.

THE STARS SAY

For Tuesday, March 6

The planetary aspects ruling on this day preage great activity, interest and achievement, with particularly interesting events in employment as well as in all pertaining to writings, publications and promotions. The young are under most auspicious sway for promotion, favors, and a generally happy and gratifying state of affairs. Preferment and favors are assured.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of fine opportunity for success, promotion and preferment at the hands of those their superiors in employment and position. These may be safely approached for advancement or for favors. All literary publishing, promotion and intellectual things flourish.

A child born on this day should be versatile, brilliant, active and very popular with its superiors and those who might practically advance them to good station.

Wrong Diet "Blotches" Skin
IT IS the proper ambition of every young person to have a clear and attractive skin. Nothing adds more to the appeal of any face than sparkling eyes and a velvety skin.

There are many causes for rough, pimply, dry and harsh skin. Perhaps it might promote the happiness of some young man or woman if I said a few words on the subject. I am sure this would be the case if I could give advice that would help to acquire the desired complexion. "Don't envy a good complexion—have one!" Since it was invented, that sentence has attracted many a pair of wistful eyes.

In the body are a number of tiny chemical laboratories, producing substances which have a vital effect upon our welfare. These busy establishments are known as "endocrine glands" or "ductless glands," because they pour their secretions directly into the blood stream. Upon the proper functioning of these organs depends the general health and normal behavior. Failure of just the right speed of action may result in unpleasant changes, notably in the skin.

Right Habits of Living
But there are other physical defects which may cause the skin to be blotchy or unpleasantly marred by eruptions and pimples. For example, acne, that common ailment of youth, is frequently associated with wrong eating and failure of elimination. This is true, too, of most of the superficial skin ailments.

We cannot hope to clear the skin till right habits of living are established. To this end, there must be cleanliness of the surface and cleanliness of intestinal tract. Simple food, green vegetables, milk, fruit and plenty of water, should be added to exercise, fresh air, and sunlight. By following these suggestions I have no doubt that many an unattractive skin would give way to the glow of health and beauty.

Answers to Health Queries

Miss J. W. Q.—What can be done for stuttering in young people from about the age of fourteen to eighteen? Can it be cured and what is the underlying cause?

A.—For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

Mrs. C. R. Q.—My son, a young man of 25, has three red rings—one on his back, one on the arm and another on the thigh. While they are not the same size they are all inflamed around the edges. They do not appear to bother him very much. What would you advise?

A.—While ringworm would be apt to cause symptoms such as you describe, it would be rather difficult to advise you definitely without making an examination. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

WASTING U. S. MONEY

Editor, The News:
Current reports indicate that Washington is surprised that Panama has returned our treasury check of $250,000, tendered in payment of canal rentals and asked that payment be made in gold.

The query with me is—why should they be surprised? If I am correctly informed, Panama, if paid today in gold, $250,000 can return that gold to the U. S. Treasury and receive a treasury check for it of approximately $350,000.

If I am not correct in the above, and there are many others whose impressions are the same as mine, then I would like to be corrected.

If I am correct, then the secretary of the treasury's request for ten advisers at ten thousand per year might be a good investment.

SAWYER ENTERS GOVERNOR RACE

"I Am a Candidate for Governor"—That's All He Says

(By Associated Press)

CINCINNATI, March 5. — In just six words, Lieut. Gov. Charles Sawyer of Cincinnati today announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for governor.

"I am," he said, "a candidate for governor." and that was all.

It had, however, been considered a certainty for weeks that Sawyer would seek the nomination, entering the field in opposition to Martin L. Davey of Kent, and William H. Pickrel, of Dayton, whom he succeeded to the lieutenant-governorship.

Short, slim, but aggressive, Sawyer's first venture into state wide politics was in the race for lieutenant governor. Previously he had served two terms in Cincinnati's city council, and the presidency of the school board of suburban Glendale, an office he still holds.

His parents, both teachers in their time, Sawyer himself has taught in schools, studying law at the University of Cincinnati in the daytime in his younger days, and teaching high school pupils at night. He is a World war veteran.

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE

"Hurry, John Harmon! There's an omelet. I've learned the trick at last, but do hurry, darling, so we can gobble it up before anything happens to it!"

He came out to her then, his hair ruffled, a determined smile on his face. He helped her put the omelet and the coffee and the platter of bacon on the table. She was gay and flushed and very lovely in a crisp violet smock.

"Good day?" he asked casually, to make conversation.

"Quite sold a set of Balzac—a very rare set. Mr. Rose nearly wept when I wrapped it up."

"You don't find it dull?"

"Quiet but never dull. There are books that are better company than people—I'm just discovering it."

"I know. I've felt like that some of them."

"How long did you sit up writing last night, John Harmon?"

"Oh, not so long. I didn't get anywhere, either—that's the worst of it—threw everything I wrote in to the waste-basket. The book is going stale on me, Stan." Suddenly he stopped eating and buried his face in his hands.

"Just exactly what do you mean by that, John Harmon?"

"Just that I can't explain it but I've lost the heart for it." Abruptly his head came up and he was speaking quickly, bitterly. "A smart crowd about smart people—my heavens, Stanley, the irony of it! When the only people I ever see are so darn drab and uninteresting! You can't live the way we do and write about the sort of people that are in my book—it's a joke, a miserable joke! I'm going to ask Maynard to give me a job at the office—a regular job pounding a typewriter. It's all I'm good for anyway!"

Stanley felt her breath tighten in her throat. He had included her in "dull and uninteresting people," he had said. "You can't live the way we do." He had not meant to but he had hurt her—hurt her terribly. He had ruthlessly and carelessly snatched away something sweet and rather precious that was her delight, in this life they had made together.

But more than she was hurt she was concerned for John Harmon. The book must really be going stale or he would never have spoken like that; would not be setting their now, scowling and heavy-eyed letting her precious omelet sink slowly into a dejected heap on the platter. And the book was John Harmon—it was a definite part of him, he couldn't give it up and still be himself. John Harmon without the urge to write would be like a lamp with the flame snuffed out, a grate filled with gray ashes instead of glowing coal; just another dull person instead of a real, vital individual with a keen enthusiasm and an impetuous zest for living.

Suddenly Stanley forgot her own hurt in this clear conception of John Harmon no longer writing a novel but working in an office, his typewriter quiet, his study unused. And in her concern she spoke sharply.

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself—sitting there like a sulky child, saying you won't play any more! Did you think you were never going to hit a snag, run up against difficulties and discouragement? Just because you've got talent and a spark of genius and can write pages that don't have to have a line rewritten doesn't mean you can go on that way indefinitely. The trouble with you, John Harmon, is that you've kept at it too long. What you need is to get away from it for a while—get outdoors and forget it and let your head clear up—for a month!"

His head came up from where he had dropped it against his clenched hands. He stared at her with tormented eyes. He had expected her to understand—or had he? Anyway, she hadn't. She thought this thing that had happened to him was something that fresh air would cure! As though it was a silly headache or a fit of temper or something equally ridiculous! Then, as he stared at her, the anger went out of his eyes, out of his tightened mouth—oh, how sweet she looked, and how troubled, with that little frown between her eyes and her cheeks very pink and her hair flung back like that from her forehead—and she was his, he had held her in his arms, loved her.

"I'm a fool, darling—a selfish fool." He jumped up and went around the table and took her in his arms. Or what really happened was—he went into her arms. For the moment anyway he was the bewildered child and she the consoling mother. Perhaps in those few minutes that he knelt beside her and clung to her, John Harmon was more ingenious with her than he had ever allowed himself to be before. For a time, at least, he forgot himself completely in his need of her; he was content to take, and in the taking he found a sweet and gentle release from the restraint which had been so much a part of his love for her.

And so it had ended—that time. But as the days went on Stanley, watching closely without seeming to do so, knew that things were still wrong with John Harmon. Never again did he say as much in words, but he didn't need to—it was there in his eyes, in the set of his shoulders, in the forced gaiety of his smile.

"How's 'Gloria' coming?" Stanley would ask casually, coming in from the bookshop at night, bringing with her a breath of crisp air, a sparkle of winter sunset.

"Not very fast—I'm having to re-write a lot. The people seem to have lost their realism—they're all stuffed with sawdust."

"Would it help any to read it aloud?"

"No, I'd rather not. Something's bound to happen—it'll take a brace suddenly. I wouldn't work on it for a while but I'm anxious to get it ready for spring publication—Maynard's promised to look at it, you know."

"Yes, I know. I wish I could do something, John Harmon."

"You're a darling, Stanley, I'm afraid I'm a moody fellow. Tell me you don't mind, dear?"

"Not as long as things are right with you."

"Things will always be right with me as long as I have you. I love you, Stanley."

"And I love you."

And so January slipped into February and John Harmon grew thin and anxious-eyed and sat up far into the night, and in the morning the waste-paper basket was filled with torn paper and the pile of manuscript had sometimes not benefited by a single page.

Headed for Spring

The Coiffure Assumes a New Importance In the Millinery Mode

By MARIE MAROT

IT IS WISE to select a hat silhouette that is becoming and then have a coiffure designed that will subtly become part of the head line. If the hair is dressed and waved simply away from the face, then a halo braid worn at night will give new distinction when a hat cannot be worn. Just now, between seasons hats are interesting us and the model shown should point the way to what is being worn. Bright brown straw cloth makes the cap with its lace band of gold lame and another touch of the lame in back. The coiffure shows the halo braid backed with curls. For spring wear there is a navy crepe hat trimmed with a pert little bird.

HOME MAKING HELPS

By Wanda Barton

Being a Slave To Dust Rag SOME TIME AGO this department warned those women who were by way of becoming "duster wives" that the virtue of being house-proud could easily become a vice. And now before me is a letter from a man asking me what I think of those women who sink their individuality completely in their homes and family. He isn't in favor of such a procedure nor are many men to whom I have talked. And so, it may surprise those women who imagine that the family is grateful for such sacrifices, to find that very self-same family criticizing it.

"Mother" Should Be—

Ingratitude? Not a bit of it. There are very few husbands and children who would not want "mother" to be gay, happy, jolly, with her own hobbies and interests. Of course, no one wants that these attributes should be carried to excess. But that is another story. What this department is concerned about today is the woman who becomes so wrapped up in home and family that she seems to forget that she is an individual at all. Her personal appearance, her complexion, her figure, her clothes, she ceases to bother about at all. Old friends, hobbies and interests disappear into a cloudy past that becomes more and more remote as the years go by.

Have Other Interests

Does not such a woman stamp herself as a person with a one-track mind the sort of woman who can handle only one thing? She imagines that her family is swimming in a sea of gratitude for such an effacing mother. But usually this is far from the truth. Husband wants to be proud of his wife, children want to be proud of their mother. And they want to know why she doesn't look smart and trim.

If you have allowed yourself to slip, spruce up. Have a permanent find a new way of doing your hair. Get some clothes after you have dieted and exercised and got that figure under control a little bit. Join a lending library, read your newspaper, join a current events club. You can find the time for these important things without neglecting your duties. Speed things up, go on a schedule. Make the time.

Wynekoop Murder
Case Nearing End
CHICAGO, March 5.—The state's long fight to punish Dr. Alice Wynekoop as the murderer of her young daughter-in-law Rheta is almost over.

Only rebuttal witnesses, concluding arguments and the court's instructions to the jury remained to be heard today. The jury, however, was not expected to receive the case before Tuesday.

The state planned the rebuttal testimony to refute Dr. Wynekoop's testimony that she was tricked by Rheta's father. In the statement she admitted she incidentally choked the girl to death and then shot her in the back.

Meanwhile the elderly defendant, who collapsed Saturday during cross examination was reported to have gained considerable strength by her week-end rest in the county jail.

Firemen Injured
CLEVELAND, March 5.—Five firemen were injured fighting flames which swept the old L & K hotel buildings, causing a loss fixed tentatively at $60,000. The fire, the most spectacular here in many months, burned for 12 hours.

Salem, Rayen, Scienceville To Compete In Akron Tourney

QUAKERS BOW IN FINALS CONTEST BY 31-20 MARGIN

Win Over Scienceville in Afternoon Fray, Lose in Title Play-off

Youngstown Rayen's giant and brilliant-performing cage quintet won the Northeastern Ohio sectional Class A basketball championship as they outlasted Salem High tilters, 31 to 20, in finals of the district tournament at Youngstown East gym Saturday night.

Rayen, as the champion, Salem, the runner-up, and Youngstown Scienceville, consolation winner, will represent this district in tournament competition at the Akron Goodyear auditorium, Akron, Friday night.

They will vie for honors in three games with survivors of the Akron tournament which opened last week.

Scienceville Trims South While Salem was howling to Rayen so decisively in the finals battle, Scienceville emerged triumphant over Youngstown South, 35-28, the consolation game.

Salem advanced into the finals through a spectacular 24 to 20 decision over Scienceville in afternoon semi-finals while Rayen won the right to battle the Quakers for the sectional crown by winning over South, 25-20, in the second semi-finals clash.

Little Jackie Mullins thrilled an audience of more than 1,000 fans with a dazzling all-around performance to lead the Quakers through to their victory over Scienceville. Besides playing a fine defensive game Mullins led the Salem scoring attack with nine points. Pressing him close for honors, however, were Lawrence Kaercher and Wayne Siding.

Quakers Take 9-4 Lead Salem took an early lead over the 1933 champions on goals by Mullins and Pukalski and were in front, 9-4, at the close of the first period. Scienceville advanced a point but still trailed 13-9 at the half and Salem still continued to set the pace as the third stanza closed with the count at 19-13.

Two buckets by Longstrech and another by Detering evened the score at 19-19 in the first minute of play of the final session but Salem rallied behind baskets by Siding and Mullins and came through with the victory.

The Rayen-South fracas was a hard-fought affair with the Lansing-coached quintet triumphing through superior foul-shooting ability. South outscored Rayen on field goals but the victors registered nine free throws to pull out in front.

Wheaton, Russell Star The great individual performances of "Chuck" Wheaton and the pint-sized Don Russell were big factors in Rayen's annihilation of Salem in the finals. Wheaton ran wild offensively to score 14 points while right behind him was Russell with 12.

The first period was hard fought and ended with the score tied at 4-4 but Rayen pushed ahead, 13-9, at the half. Bouncing a fine passing attack that the Quakers seemingly could not cope with, the Youngstowners tallied 10 points to Salem's four in the third period then coasted throughout the fourth to win handily.

Scienceville snapped out of it beautifully to overwhelm Rusty Ashbaugh's basketmen in the consolation fray, South, playing great ball all through the tournament, couldn't get going in this fray and only a last-quarter spurt kept it from being made the victim of an overwhelming rout.

Honor Pukalski, Siding Tournament officials, following the games, combined for the selection of the 12 outstanding players of the competition and awarded all-star honors to two Salem players, Siding and Pukalski. Rayen placed three players on the squad, Russell, Cantwell and James, while Longstrech and Noble were honored from the Scienceville squad.

Other players honored were Mascher of East Palestine; Kinell of Newton Falls; Myers of Youngstown South; Miller of Hubbard and Isaacs of Struthers.

Fans differed greatly with the selections of the officials, clamoring for mention for that scintillating Salem star, Mullins, and the selection of Wheaton, Rayen pivotman who so completely outplayed Siding in the finals tilt.

Carnerian Haymaker That Went Astray

If this sledge-hammer right from Primo Carnera had landed on Tommy Loughran in the ninth round of his Philadelphia challenger. But the lighter and more agile Mr. Loughran managed to duck his mount, his title bout at Miami, Fla., the Italian champion tenuous opponent's heavy swings, as he did on this would undoubtedly have won more than a decision of occasion, to last the full distance.

SACHSENS LOSE TO HOMESTEAD

Rally Sensationally in the Final Period but Bow, 39 to 37

Salem Sachsens sustained their first setback of the 1933-34 Penn-Ohio league season as they bowed to a strong Homestead, Pa., quintet, 39-37, at Homestead Saturday night.

The defeat was sustained in spite of a sensational 20-point rally put on by the Salem five in the last quarter as they appeared doomed to a one-sided trouncing. On the short end of a 32-17 score, the Salem five came back sensationally in the final stanza and almost forced the game into overtime.

Baseball Gossip

From Southern Camps

ORLANDO, Fla.—The Brooklyn Dodgers' first workout was slightly "phony" but Casey Stengel promised real work today.

The squad of 19 was summoned to the practice field yesterday afternoon but it was largely for the benefit of photographers.

ST. PETERSBURG—Thanks to Babe Ruth's early capitulation, the New York Yankees have adopted a policy this season of permitting none of the holdouts to train with the team until they come to terms.

MIAMI, Fla.—The New York Giants have completed their first week of spring training and Bill Terry is convinced the world champions will get better pitching than they did a year ago.

"I look for Parmelee to come through consistently," Bill says, "and Schumacher should be better. Then, of course, there's Hubbell, Fitzsimmons, Clark and a couple of young fellows I don't want to boast about now."

PASADENA—Although not exactly worried, Manager Lew Fonseca of the Chicago White Sox, is wondering what has become of Luke Appling, his prize shortstop.

Nothing has been heard from Appling, who hit 322 last season. Meanwhile Mysterious Joe Chamberlain, who eluded the Sox all last season, has been doing well at short.

BOSTON—Eddie Collins, business manager of the Red Sox, believes that Herb Pennock will be worth his weight in gold in the coming campaign.

"I never saw Herb looking better than when I met him recently in New York," said Collins. "He will enter perfectly into our scheme of things. He is willing to start or finish ball games. He will be of inestimable value in any capacity if it's only in coaching the young pitchers."

LEGAL NOTICE
I, J. Fulton, State Superintendent of Banks in charge of the Liquidation of The Citizens Savings Bank of Salem, Ohio, Plaintiff, vs. Claudia McCown et al. Defendants. Case No. 24773.
Claudia McCown, whose last known address was 1012 Maryland Avenue, New Castle, Pa., will take notice that on the 3rd day of February, 1934, the undersigned, J. J. Fulton, State Superintendent of Banks in charge of the Liquidation of the Citizens Savings Bank of Salem, Ohio, filed his Petition in the Court of Common Pleas of Columbiana County, Ohio, in Case No. 24773, alleging that the defendants above named have or claim to have an interest in the following described real estate, to-wit:

Situated in the City of Salem, County of Columbiana and State of Ohio, and known as lot No. 1 in A. Q. Casaberry's Addition of lots to the city of Salem, County of Columbiana and State of Ohio. Said lot having a frontage of 32 1/2 feet on the South side of East High Street and depth of 158 feet. The plat of said addition is recorded in plat book No. 4 page 70 of the record of plats of Columbiana County, Ohio, and being the same premises conveyed to this grantor by deed dated Aug. 15, 1924. Be the same more or less, but subject to all legal highways.

Further known as Door No. 1195 East Third Street, Salem, Ohio.

The petition further alleges that by reason of the default of the defendant, obligor, and the payment of a promissory note according to its tenor, the conditions of a concurrent mortgage deed given to secure the payment of said note and conveying the premises above described, have been broken and the same has become absolute.

The prayer of the petition is for the foreclosure of plaintiffs mortgage, for the marshalling of liens and the sale of said premises, and the proceeds applied to the payment of said liens in the proper order of their priority; that the defendants named above be required to answer and set forth their respective interests in said premises or be forever barred from asserting the same, and for such other and further relief as is just and equitable.

The defendants above named are required to answer on or before the 31st day of March, A. D. 1934.
J. J. FULTON, State Superintendent of Banks in charge of the Liquidation of The Citizens Savings Bank, Salem, Ohio.

Assembly Returns To Work Tuesday To Debate Funds

COLUMBUS, O., March 5.—A battle over an Ohio retail sales tax looms again this week as the Ohio legislature returns tomorrow for what may be the final step of a long-delayed action on a state financial program.

Their problem two-fold, the lawmakers are faced with the necessity of finding more revenues for 1934 and then to deal with a more or less permanent revenue program for 1935 and thereafter.

A three per cent sales tax is the backbone of a schedule approved by a special tax commission and which will be offered the house-senate joint tax committee tomorrow. Other measures are for a combination net and earned income tax, increased non-railroad utility taxes, a state school financing plan to cost $23,000,000, and a re-draft of a bill for refunding road assessments. The schedule is intended to meet the necessity for around $55,000,000 added finances next year. Repeal of "nuisance" taxes and possibility of cigarette taxes being considered. The governor said he would ask that the sales tax, if to help pay this year's bills.

Hanging fire, with their fate in doubt, are several measures intended for the 1934 emergency. Apparently stalled in the senate adopted, be made effective Dec. 1, taxation committee are the house-adopted bills to appoint receivers for income-producing, tax delinquent property and for the refund of municipal bonds, to allow sinking funds to be used for current operations.

He was dead, of heart disease.

CONTINUE HUNT FOR DILLINGER

Triple Investigation, in Meantime, Started by Authorities

that we need, but public officials possessed of the courage, character, and intelligence and ability to enforce the laws."

Defends Her Guards
Attorney General Philip Lutz, of Indiana, expressed surprise "that the Lake county officials let Dillinger get away," but Sheriff Holley, reported on the verge of a nervous breakdown, defended the dozen or more guards whom Dillinger herded into a cell with the aid of a self-carved wooden pistol, made of a broom-stick, a razor handle and two blades.

"I'd have done the same thing," she said, "if someone had put a gun at my back."

The hunt for the desperado spread today in all directions. The highways of Indiana, Illinois, Ohio and Missouri were carefully watched for Dillinger and his Negro companion, Herbert Youngblood, who used Sheriff Holley's automobile (a Ford with Indiana license number 679,929, with red and green headlights), to make their escape.

In Chicago supervising Captain John Stege and a picked band of sharpshooting policemen, including Sergeant Frank Reynolds, killer of 13 criminals, combed underworld haunts. Detectives searched the homes of some 200 paroled convicts yesterday, but without success. All police are under orders to "shoot to kill," and because of this Chief of Detectives William Schoemaker expressed doubt that Dillinger would choose Chicago for his hide-out.

Plans As He Goes
The investigators were told by Deputy Sheriff Ernest Blunk who was taken prisoner by Dillinger on a 40-mile ride, that the quick-triggered gunman had to make his plans as he sped to freedom, but it was considered almost a certainty that he would attempt to effect a liaison with John Hamilton, his lieutenant, who is wanted in Chicago for killing a policeman. After Dillinger had been captured and tamed by Tucson, Ariz., officers last January 30, he told the police Hamilton was dead, but investigators declined to believe his story.

Another possibility for a lead in the hunt was offered by a visit of a mysterious woman to the Crown Point jail about two weeks ago. She posed as Dillinger's wife. The sheriff's office here had protested that Dillinger was not married, but the visit was permitted by a judge, and lasted for half an hour. The woman was being hunted in the hope her apprehension might throw some light on the affair.

As the search widened, various reports sprang up that Dillinger and his Negro pal, had been seen at various points. All proved untrue.

Dillinger's three henchmen in the county jail at Lima, Ohio—Harry Piermont, Charles Makley and Russell Clark, held for the Sarber murder—were hopefully awaiting Dillinger's appearance to deliver them to freedom, as Dillinger himself was freed last year by pals.

CINCINNATI, O., March 5.—Burns suffered when his clothing caught fire resulted in the death of Calvin Lee Hill, 7. His mother, Mrs. Carlela Hill, was burned in beating out the flames.

PUBLIC AUCTION
The personal property belonging to the estate of Philomena Medinger, consisting of seven rooms of household furnishings, including home made fancy work and some antiques, will be sold by the undersigned at public auction at her residence, No. 571 Columbia Street, Salem, on Saturday the 10th day of March, 1934. ## Theater Attractions

TEEMING with emotion and abounding in richness and beauty, "Carolina" opened at the State theater yesterday. It will conclude Tuesday. The cast is studded with seven stars, all of whom do more than justice to the picture, one of sweet, human pathos. The screen play depicts realistically and dramatically the aspirations and the struggle of the South, and a southern family to regain the glory that once was theirs.

The story concerns itself with a poor Northern girl who has gone to the south to grow tobacco on the plantation of a decadent but still dignified and proud family. The young son of the family falls in love with the girl over the objections of his mother who wishes him to marry a wealthy Charleston girl to help along the plantation. However, the boy, tired of the pretense of his people, is so impressed by the talk of this delightful girl that he is inspired to new heights of ambition and new visions of glory for the plantation that will some day be his.

Mother Rejoins
The strenuous objections and the hatred that his mother bears the girl finally force her to leave. Then Janet Gaynor, who wishes him to marry a wealthy Charleston girl to help along the plantation. However, the boy, tired of the pretense of his people, is so impressed by the talk of this delightful girl that he is inspired to new heights of ambition and new visions of glory for the plantation that will some day be his.

Whisky Murderess Fights Life Term
GREENWOOD, Miss., March 5.—Dr. Sarah Ruth Dean, baby specialist whom a jury branded a poison highball murderess, rested today and tried to regain her strength for a "last ditch" fight against a life term.

Unless she can upset the guilty verdict returned by a jury Saturday, she must spend the rest of her life at hard labor, expiating the death of Dr. John Preston Kennedy, surgeon, associate and admirer. The state charged she gave him whisky and poison in "a jealous rage."

Pale and ill, Dr. Dean was freed under $10,000 bond. Judge S. F. Davis set June 2, as the date for an appeal for a new trial. Recovering from the shock of the conviction, Dr. Dean drove 100 miles with relatives and a nurse, to the home of her aunt, Mrs. T. W. Cooley, at Sharon.

The verdict and the life sentence fixed by the jury took the defendant and her counsel by surprise. They had expressed confidence she would be acquitted.

SENATE PROBES BANK SALARIES

Ten Officials Drew More Than $100,000 Each in "Holiday" Year

don S. Rentschler, president, received $125,000 plus a bonus of $5,550.

James H. Perkins, who succeeded Mitchell, was getting only $45,000 a year with a bonus of $4,550. The report showed, incidentally, that the bonus system uncovered by the committee's investigation, some of the bigger institutions, new only a memory. Most paid no bonus during the year, the highest were insignificant compared to those of the boom days.

Other bankers who drew $100,000 or more during the year, including Charles S. McCain, chairman of the board, Chase National bank, salary $128,188, bonus $2,640.
